Credit Hours: 3 hours
The Human Experience
Topic: The Human Experience: Language, Identity, Memory & Diaspora. This interdisciplinary course approaches the study of global cultures through literature-in-translation and film. Organized thematically into four units, Language, Identity, Memory and Diaspora, the format of the course is creative and participatory. Chronologically the course reaches from the archaic origins of language into the present day; geographically the course traverses the globe.

AIS 265  Intro to American Indian Lit
credit: 3 hours.
Introduces students to the study of American Indian literature by focusing on texts by contemporary American Indian novelists, poets, and playwrights. Over the course of the semester, students will consider how indigenous aesthetics shape narrative in addition to examining how American Indian authors engage the legacies of colonization and the histories of their tribal communities through their stories. Same as ENGL 265.
