History

HIST 406  History of Mexico from 1519  credit: 2 TO 4 hours.

Development of Mexico from the conquest to the postrevolutionary present. 3 undergraduate hours. 2 or 4 graduate hours.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>CRN</th>
<th>Type</th>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Time</th>
<th>Days</th>
<th>Location</th>
<th>Instructor</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>32349</td>
<td>Lecture-Discussion</td>
<td>G2</td>
<td>09:30 AM - 10:50 AM</td>
<td>TR</td>
<td>307 - Gregory Hall</td>
<td>Brosseder, C</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Credit Hours: 2 hours
Restricted to Graduate - Urbana-Champaign.
Title: History of Mexico from 1519
Description: This course is designed as a survey class focusing on the colonial and modern history of Mexico and its people. Particular emphasis will be placed on the cultural, economic, and political structures and processes that shaped and continued to influence life in Mexico from its colonial past to the present. Key issues such as colonialism, racism, mestizaje, the role of the Catholic Church, independence, the rise of the nation state, the Reforma, the Porfiriato, the Mexican Revolution(s), the economic "miracle," and US-relations will all be examined critically - from time to time in light of comparative themes in Peru in order to discuss the singularity of Mexico's history. Course materials include secondary sources as well as primary documents, literature, paintings, and film in order to provide insights into the complex and diverse history of the "Many Mexicos." To capture its diversity, this course will also pay particular attention to the distinct histories of various regions in the country.

| 46119| Lecture-Discussion | G4      | 09:30 AM - 10:50 AM | TR   | 307 - Gregory Hall | Brosseder, C |

Credit Hours: 4 hours
Restricted to Graduate - Urbana-Champaign.
Title: History of Mexico from 1519
Description: This course is designed as a survey class focusing on the colonial and modern history of Mexico and its people. Particular emphasis will be placed on the cultural, economic, and political structures and processes that shaped and continued to influence life in Mexico from its colonial past to the present. Key issues such as colonialism, racism, mestizaje, the role of the Catholic Church, independence, the rise of the nation state, the Reforma, the Porfiriato, the Mexican Revolution(s), the economic "miracle," and US-relations will all be examined critically - from time to time in light of comparative themes in Peru in order to discuss the singularity of Mexico's history. Course materials include secondary sources as well as primary documents, literature, paintings, and film in order to provide insights into the complex and diverse history of the "Many Mexicos." To capture its diversity, this course will also pay particular attention to the distinct histories of various regions in the country.

| 46120| Lecture-Discussion | U3      | 09:30 AM - 10:50 AM | TR   | 307 - Gregory Hall | Brosseder, C |

Credit Hours: 3 hours
Restricted to Undergrad - Urbana-Champaign.
Title: Comparative Colonialisms and Modernities
Description: This course is designed as a survey class focusing on the colonial and modern history of Mexico and its people. Particular emphasis will be placed on the cultural, economic, and political structures and processes that shaped and continued to influence life in Mexico from its colonial past to modern day present. Key issues such as colonialism, racism, mestizaje, the role of the Catholic Church, independence, the rise of the nation state, the Reforma, the Porfiriato, the Mexican Revolution(s), the economic "miracle," and US-relations will all be examined critically - from time to time in light of comparative themes in Peru in order to discuss the singularity of Mexico's history. Course materials include secondary sources as well as primary documents, literature, paintings, and film in order to provide insights into the complex and diverse history of the region.