Disability in Popular Culture
Disability in Popular Culture. This course is designed to explore how mass media and popular culture shapes perceptions of persons living with disabilities. Media and popular culture such as books, movies, television, magazines and newspapers often serve as an important source of knowledge and insight about important human issues. Media has the power to perpetuate both accurate information and distortions which reinforce imagery and ideas in regard to people with disabilities. This course will examine how perceptions created by the media are absorbed and accepted by the mainstream public and inform how individuals with disabilities are often viewed and treated.

REHB 330  Disability in American Society  credit: 3 hours.

Presents a range of issues pertaining to disability including demographics, disability rights, services, policies and current issues. Applies a disability studies perspective in which problems associated with individuals’ impairments are seen to result from socially imposed barriers. Same as CHLH 330.

This course satisfies the General Education Criteria for a:
Social & Beh Sci - Soc Sci
